How do students learn to learn?

After a successful first meeting in the network on first year PBL, we would like to invite you all to a new seminar in the network. The topic for the next seminar is "how do students at 1st semester learn to learn?". At the seminar colleagues will share experiences from their programmes and we will discuss how to design courses, supervision and activities aiming to scaffold students learning at 1st Semester.

- 13.00-13.10 Welcome
- 13.10-13.30 Casper Feilberg, Department of Communication and Psychology: How can we support first year students in their process of embodying a professional and academic habitus?
- 13.30-13.50 Rasmus Løvenstein Olsen, Department of Electronic Systems: Internet Technologies and Computer Systems
- 13.50-14.05 Coffee and Tea
- 14.05-14.25 Jan Holm Ingemann, Department of Political Science: Transformation from pupil to responsible (PBL) student – a core challenge
- 14.25-14.45 Claus Monrad Splid og Pia Bøgelund, Department of Planning: The group process-analysis and its reporting (supported by course-work, consultation, workshop and feedback) as scaffolding of learning and learning-to-learn.
- 14.45-15.05 Jette Holgaard, Department of Planning: Focus on feedback in course teaching – an example from Medialogy
- 15.05-15.05 Discussion (including the topic for the next meeting).
